The Physician, his Prologue and his Tale

Here is the description of the physician from the General Prologue

The medical Doctor is the best in his profession. His practice sounds to us more like astrology and magic than medicine, but it was typical of the period

	With us there was a DOCTOR of PHYSIC.	medicine
	In all this world ne was there none him like
	To speak of physic and of surgery,
	For he was grounded in astronomy: <sup>1</sup>	astrology
415	He kept his patient a full great deal
	In hours, by his magic natural. <sup>2</sup>
	Well could he fórtunen the áscendent
	Of his imáges for his patïent.
	He knew the cause of every malady
420	Were it of hot or cold or moist or dry
	And where engendered and of what humor.	See Endpapers
	He was a very perfect practiser.
	The cause y-know, and of his harm the root, <sup>3</sup>	known / source
	Anon he gave the sicke man his boote.	medicine, cure
425	Full ready had he his apothecaries	druggists
	To send him drugs and his letuaries,	medicines
	For each of them made other for to win;	to profit
	Their friendship was not newe to begin. <sup>4</sup>	-

He knows all the medical authorities

Well knew he the old Esculapius

&lt;sup>1</sup> 414: Astronomy = astrology. Medieval medicine was less the practice of an applied science than of magic natural (white magic) including astrology.

 $<sup>^{2}</sup>$  415-18: These four lines are hard to render except by paraphrase: he treated his patient by "white magic" and he knew how to cast horoscopes and calculate astronomically the best hours to treat his patient.

&lt;sup>3</sup> 423: "When the cause and root of his illness were diagnosed".

&lt;sup>4</sup> 428: They were old colleagues.

430	And Dioscorides and eke Rusus, <sup>1</sup>	also Old Hippocras, Hali and Galen
	Serapion, Rasis and Avicen, Averrois, Damascene and Constantine,
	Bernard and Gatesden and Gilbertine.
	His personal habits, dietary and economic 435	Of his diet measurable was he	moderate
	For it was of no superfluity	excess
	But of great nourishing and digestible.
	His study was but little on the Bible. <sup>2</sup>
	In sanguine and in perse he clad was all	In red & blue
440	Lined with taffeta and with sendall,	silk
	And yet he was but easy of dispense.	thrifty spender
	He kepte what he won in pestilence.	during plague
	For gold in physic is a cordial,	Because Therefore he loved gold in specïal. <sup>3</sup>

Introduction to The Physician's Tale.

There is no particular reason why this strange tale should be told by the Doctor unless it is a clumsy joke about surgery. A tale about the extremely drastic measures a father takes to preserve his daughter's honor, it could just as easily, and perhaps more appropriately, have been given to those professional celibates the Second Nun or the Clerk, since it is, if anything, a tale in praise of virginity, with even the major characters called Virginius and Virginia, like types in an allegory.

&lt;sup>1</sup> 429-434: This list of classical, Arabic and other medieval authorities on medicine functions somewhat like the list of the knight's battles, a deliberate exaggeration; here the result is mildly comic, intentionally.

&lt;sup>2</sup> 438: Physicians were sometimes thought to tend towards atheism. Perhaps the original rime here was meant to be comic; it could work in modern English if so regarded, with "digestible" pronounced exaggeratedly to rime fully with "Bible."

&lt;sup>3</sup> 443-4: A pun. Gold was used in some medications (physic); but physic is also the practice of medicine at which much gold can be made, especially in time of plague (pestilence), and that is good for the heart (cordial).

For some reason, the tale, derived from the Roman historian Livy, was popular in the Middle ages, having been told in one form or another in the Romance of the Rose, by Boccaccio, and by Chaucer's contemporary John Gower. This popularity is as inexplicable to us as that of the tale of patient Griselda told by the Clerk or the tale of Constance as told by the Man of Law. Impossibly virtuous women like these and like Virginia in this present tale belong, for our taste, in a collection of saints' lives like the Golden Legend or in an exemplum for a sermon about virginity.

Because of its thin plot, absence of characterization, and inappropriate or moralizing digressions from the narrative, it is not surprising that some scholars think that the tale was not written for the Canterbury Tales but rescued from something earlier and pressed into service without much-needed revision which would not require lines like this:

Sufficeth this example now as here, For I must turn again to my mattér. (103-4

As Tatlock early remarked, it would fit well enough as a draft for part of the Legend of Good Women, another of Chaucer's unfinished works.

When the narrator finally gets to the gist of his tale (118 ff), it moves with some narrative speed, and even attains some affecting pathos. But then the ending is too speedy, and we are summarily told that everyone who was ?consentant" to the crime was hanged, although we have never been told of anyone ?consentant" except the two perpetrators, providing the final moral confusion in a confused and confusing story.

It is not surprising that the end of the tale, like much of the earlier part, is another dreary bit of moralizing that does not even follow from the narrative.

Small wonder that Harry Bailly, perhaps standing in for Chaucer's better judgement, finds the story, though affecting in part, finally depressing. See his response at the end, leading to his invitation to the Pardoner to tell some ?mirth or japes". Instead, the Pardoner tells a moral tale too, but in a class totally above the Physician's, showing how an examplary tale could be told.

THE PHYSICIAN'S TALE.

A Roman patrician has a daughter favored by Nature with great beauty

	THERE was, as telleth Titus Livius,	Roman historian
	A knight, that cleped was Virginius,	was called Fulfilled of honour and worthiness,
	And strong of friendes, and of great richesse.	wealth
	This knight a daughter hadde by his wife,
	No children had he more in all his life.
	Fair was this maid in excellent beauty
	Aboven every wight that man may see:	every person
	For Nature hath with sovereign diligence
10	Y-formed her in so great excellence,
	As though she woulde say, "Lo, I, Natúre,
	Thus can I form and paint a creätúre,
	When that me list. Who can me counterfeit?	when I please / can copy
	Pygmalion? Not though he aye forge and beat,	sculptor / constantly forge
	Or grave, or painte, for I dare well sayn,	engrave
	Apelles, Xeuxis, shoulden work in vain,	sculptor & artist
	Either to grave or paint or forge or beat,
	If they presumed me to counterfeit.	me = Nature
	For he that is the former principal,	principal creator
20	Hath maked me his vicar-general	deputy
	To form and painten earthly creätúres
	Right as me list, and each thing in my cure is	Just as I wish; care
	Under the moone, that may wane and wax.	fade & grow
	And for my work right nothing will I axe;	ask
	My Lord and I be full of one accord.	are totally
	I made her to the worship of my Lord;	to honor my Lord
	So do I all mine other creätúres,
	What colour that they have, or what figures."
	Thus seemeth me that Nature woulde say.
30	This maid of age twelve year was and tway,	12 & 2, i.e. 14
	In which that Nature hadde such delight.
	For right as she can paint a lily white

And red a rose, right with such paintúre She painted hath this noble creätúre Ere she was born, upon her limbės free, Whereas, by right, such colours shoulden be; And Phoebus dyėd hath her tresses great, Like to the streamės of his burnėd heat.

She is also virtuous

And if that excellent were her beauty, 40 A thousand-fold more virtuous was she. In her ne lacked no condition. That. is to praise, as by discretion. As well in ghost as body chaste was she: For which she flowered in virginity, With all humility and abstinence, With all attemperance and patïence, With measure, eke, of bearing and array. Discreet she was in answering alway, Though she were wise as Pallas, dare I sayn, 50 Her facond eke full womanly and plain. No counterfeited termes hadde she To seemen wise; but after her degree She spoke, and all her wordes more and less Souning in virtue and in gentleness. Shamefast she was in maiden's shamefastness, Constant in heart, and ever in busyness To drive her out of idle sluggardy: Bacchus had of her mouth right no mastery.

For wine and youthe do Venus increase,
As men in fire will casten oil and grease.
And of her owne virtue, unconstrained,
She hath herself full often sick y-feigned
For that she woulde flee the company,
Where likely was to treaten of folly,
As is at feasts, at revels, and at dances,
That be occasïons of dallïances.
Such thinges maken children for to be Too soone ripe and bold, as men may see,
Which is full perilous, and has been yore,

70 For all too soone may she learnen lore Of boldness, when she waxed is a wife. in spirit restraint discretion in conduct & dress

Her speech No pretentious phrases according to her rank (or age)

> In accord with Modest sloth B = god of wine V = sexual desire unforced pretended to be sick Because she wanted where impropriety was likely flirting

precocious & brazen always habit brazenness / grown up to be

A word of advice to governesses where

And you mistresses in your olde life, That lordes' daughters have in governance, Ne taketh of my words no displeasánce: Thinketh that you be set in governings Of lordes' daughters, only for two things: Either for you have kept your honesty, Or else for you have fallen in frailty, And knowen well enough the olde dance, And have forsaken fully such mischance For evermore. Therefore for Christe's sake To teach them virtue look that ye ne slake.

A thief of venison, that hath for-left His likerousness, and all his olde craft, Can keep a forest best of any man: Now keepeth well, for if you will you can. Look well, that you unto no vice assent, Lest you be damned for your wick' intent, For whoso doth a traitor is certáin: And taketh keep of that I shall you sayn;

Is when a wight betrayeth innocence.

90 Of alle treason, sovereign pestilence

80

Advice to parents

	You fathers, and you mothers eke also,	eke = also Though you have children, be it one or mo',
	Yours is the charge of all their surveillance,
	While that they be under your governance.
	Beware, that by example of your living,
	Or by your negligence in chastising,
	That they ne perish: for I dare well say,
100	If that they do, you shall it dear abeye.	pay for Under a shepherd soft and negligent,
	The wolf hath many a sheep and lamb to-rent.	torn apart
	Sufficeth this example now as here,
	For I must turn again to my mattér.

This virtuous maiden needed no governess

This maid, of which I tell my tale express,	in particular
She kept herself; her needed no mistréss;	no governess was needed for her
For in her living, maidens mighten read,

6

good reputation

governesses

in your care

old game of love misbehavior

don't tire left off bad habit & old game

> wicked whoever does (so) take heed worst crime a person corrupts

	As in a book, every good word and deed
	That 'longeth to a maiden virtuous:	that belongs
110	She was so prudent and so bounteous.	so good
	For which the fame out sprung on every side
	Both of her beauty and her bounty wide:	goodness > Fr. bonté
	That through the land they praised her each one,
	That loved virtue, save Envy alone,
	That sorry is of other menne's weal,	success
	And glad is of his sorrow and his unheal.	misfortune
	(The Doctor maketh this description).	diagnosis (?)

Back to the story. A judge conceives a base passion for the girl.

120	This maiden on a day went in the town Toward a temple, with her mother dear, <sup>1</sup> As is of younge maidens the mannér. Now was there then a justice in that town, That governor was of that regïon: And so befell, this judge his eyen cast Upon this maid, avising her full fast,	eyeing her intently
	As she came forth by there this judge stood. Anon his hearte changed and his mood, So was he caught with beauty of this maid,
	And to himself full privily he said:	secretly
	"This maiden shall he mine for any man."	despite any 130	Anon the Fiend into his hearte ran,	the devil
100	And taught him suddenly that he by sleight	by trickery
	This maiden to his purpose winnen might.	ey menery
	For certes, by no force, nor by no meed,	by no bribery
	Him thought he was not able for to speed;	to succeed
	For she was strong of friendes, and eke she Confirmed was in such sovereign bountý,
	That well he wist he might her never win,	well he knew
	As for to make her with her body sin.

He forms a plot to achieve his ignoble goal

For which with great deliberation 140 He sent after a churl was in the town, Which that he knew for subtle and for bold. This judge unto this churl his tale hath told a low fellow

&lt;sup>1</sup> 119: The mother never appears again, even to have some say in her daughter's fate.

In secret wise, and made him to insure	to promise
He shoulde tell it to no creätúre,
And if he did, he shoulde lose his head.
When that assented was this cursed redd,	this cursed plan
Glad was the judge, and maked him great cheer,	made great fuss of him
And gave him giftes precious and dear.
When shapen was all their conspiracy	fully planned was
From point to point, how that his lechery
Performed shoulde be full subtly, (As you shall hear it after openly),
Home goes this churl, that highte Claudius.	who was called
This falsė judge, that hightė Appius, (So was his name, for it is no fable,
But known for an historial thing notáble;	well known historical
The sentence of it sooth is out of doubt;)	the substance
This fa1sė judgė goes now fast about
To hasten his delight all that he may.
	He shouldė tell it to no creätúre, And if he did, he shouldė lose his head. When that assented was this cursėd redd, Glad was the judge, and makėd him great cheer, And gave him giftės precïous and dear. When shapen was all their conspiracy From point to point, how that his lechery Performėd shouldė be full subtly, (As you shall hear it after openly), Home goes this churl, that hightė Claudius. This falsė judge, that hightė Appius, (So was his namė, for it is no fable, But known for an historial thing notáble; The sentence of it sooth is out of doubt;) This falsė judgė goes now fast about

The plot is put into action

And so befell, soon after on a day
This false judge, as telleth us the story,
As he was wont, sat in his consistóry,
And gave his doomes upon sundry case;
His false churl came forth a full great pace,
And saide: "Lord, if that it be your will,
As do me right upon this piteous bill,
In which I 'plain upon Virginius.
And if that he will say it is not thus,
I will it prove, and finden good witnéss,
That sooth is that my bille will express."
The judge answered: "Of this in his absénce
I may not give definitive senténce.
Let do him call, and I will gladly hear;
Thou shalt have all right, and no wrong here."

Virginius came to wit the judge's will, And right anon was read this cursed bill; The sentence of it was as you shall hear: "To you, my lord, Sir Appius so dear, Showeth your poore servant Claudius, How that a knight called Virginius,

180 How that a knight called Virginius, Against the law, against all equity, in his court his judgements came up suddenly plea bring charge against that my charge is true

Have him called to find out right away The substance

Ho	deth, express against the will of me,
Му	servant, which that is my thrall by right,	my slave
Wh	ich from mine house was stolen on a night
Wh	ile that she was full young, I will it preve	prove
By	witness, lord, so that it you not grieve.	if you please
She	e n'is his daughter not, whatso he say.	whatever
Wh	erefore to you, my lord the judge, I pray;
Yie	ld me my thrall, if that it be your will."	Give me back
190 Lo,	this was all the sentence of his bill.	the substance / plea

The judge issues a summary decree against Virginius, the father

	Virginius 'gan upon the churl behold;
	But hastily, ere he his tale told	he = Virginius
	And would have proved it, as should a knight,
	And eke by witnessing of many a wight,	many a person
	That all was false that said his adversary,
	This cursed judgė wouldė nothing tarry,	would not wait
	Nor hear a word more of Virginius,
	But gave his judgement, and saide thus:
	"I deem anon this churl his servant have	I decree
200	Thou shalt no longer in thine house her save.	keep her
	Go, bring her forth, and put her in our ward;	my custody
	The churl shall have his thrall; thus I award."

Virginius goes home & tells his daughter the judge's decree and his own terrible decision

	And when this worthy knight Virginius, Through sentence of this justice Appius, Must by force his deare daughter give Unto the judge, in lechery to live,
	He goes him home, and sets him in his hall,
	And let anon his deare daughter call:	has her called
	And with a face dead as ashes cold,
210	Upon her humble face he 'gan behold,
	With father's pity sticking through his heart,
	Al' would he from his purpose not convert.	Although / not turn
	"Daughter," quod he, "Virginia by thy name,
	There be two ways either death or shame
	That thou must suffer, alas that I was bore!
	For never thou deservedest wherefore
	To dien with a sword or with a knife.
	O deare daughter, ender of my life,
	Which I have fostered up with such pleasánce	Whom I have reared

- 220 That thou were never out of my rémembrance O daughter, which that art my laste woe, And in my life my laste joy also, O gem of chastity, in patïence Take thou thy death, for this is my senténce: For love and not for hate thou must be dead, My piteous hand must smiten off thine head. Alas that ever Appius thee saw! Thus hath he falsely judged thee today." And told her all the case, as you before
- Have heard, not needeth for to tell it more.

She asks for a short reprieve & then for a quick dispatch

"O mercy, deare father," quod this maid. And with that word she both her armes laid About his neck, as she was wont to do, (The teares burst out of her eyen two), And saide: ?Goode father, shall I die? Is there no grace? Is there no remedy? "

"No certés, dearé daughter mine," quod he. ?Then give me leisure, father mine," quod she, My death for to complain a little space,

- For, pardee Jephtah gave his daughter grace For to complain, ere he her slew, alas !<sup>1</sup> And, God it wot, nothing was her trespass, But for she ran her father first to see, To welcome him with great solemnity." And with that word she fell a-swoon anon, And after, when her swooning was a-gone, She riseth up, and to her father said: ?Blessed be God, that I shall die a maid. Give me my death, ere that I have a shame.
- 250 Do with your child your will, a Gode's name."
  And with that word she prayed him full oft, That with his sword he woulde smite soft;
  And with that word, a-swoone down she fell. Her father, with full sorrowful heart and will,

said this girl in God's n.

strike gently

&lt;sup>1</sup> 240 : The Old Testament tells the story of Jephta who vows if he is victorious to sacrifice whatever first comes out of his house on his return. The first to run out is his only daughter welcoming him home. (Judges: 11.32 ff). That Virginia in pagan Roman times should quote the Hebrew Old Testament is only one of the confusions of this tale.

Her head off smote, and by the top it hent,	seized it
And to the judge he 'gan it to present,
As he sat yet in doom in consistóry.	judging in court

The outcome

	And when the judge it saw, as saith the story,
	He bade to take him, and anhang him fast.	ordered him to be taken & hanged
260	But right anon a thousand people in thrust
	To save the knight, for ruth and for pity,	for compassion
	For knowen was the false iniquity.
	The people anon had suspect in this thing
	By manner of the churles challenging,	claim
	That it was by th' assent of Appius.
	They wisten well that he was lecherous.	they knew well
	For which unto this Appius they gon.	they go
	And cast him in a prison right anon,
	Whereas he slew himself. And Claudius,	Where he 270	That servant was unto this Appius,
	Was doomed for to hang upon a tree;	was sentenced
	But that Virginius of his pity
	So prayed for him, that he was exiled,
	And else, certes, he had been beguiled:	besides / certainly / misled
	The remnant were anhanged, more and less,
	That were consentant of this cursedness.	consenting
	A moral of sorts

A moral of sorts

	Here men may see how sin hath his merit:	reward
	Beware, for no man wot whom God will smite	no one knows / strike
	In no degree, nor in which manner wise
280	The worm of conscience may agrise	make one tremble
	Of wicked life, though it so privy be.	For a wicked / secret
	That no man wot thereof save God and he:	knows
	For be he lewed man or else lered,	ignorant or learned
	He n'ot how soon that he shall be afeared,	He knows not
	Therefore I redde you this counsel take,	I advise
	Forsaketh sin, ere sinne you forsake.	before